John Keene

***

Sycorax: Requiem

Years have disappeared between his hands Echoes glide along the lime-pale walls Her tattoo in his inner ear that is the music

He listens for each morning tuning carefully To salvage memory grief quarries the days the hours The dark rises into oh but once there was such music

Twilight dreams shed their smoky skin against The palm-green mountain side still years like the ghosts Of forgotten wrecks drift in the master's voice leaves music

In its wake the sea tolling grants him no reprieve Calling from her sandy grave where is my son calling can you hear me

Calling where are those days those years that music?