

Mervyn Morris

THE LOVERS

(after René Magritte)

The lovers kissing
do not see
each other, do not feel unmediated hair and skin.

Each hooded
in an opaque swirl,
neither seems aware
of something strange.

Do not disturb.
They are in love.
Each feels a kinship
with the other's mask.